Room list, not a casino wall

Bingo 101 organises play as rooms: 75-ball, 90-ball, and a 101-ball special that uses a longer card. Buy-ins start low and step up in named halls rather than a single infinite grid. A chat rail sits on the right; it is muted by default, which keeps the call easy to hear.

Ticket bonus

₹101 lands as ticket credit, not wallet cash. You can spend it on listed halls only. Unused tickets expired on a seven-day timer in the inventory screen. That is clearer than many colour apps, but it still is not withdrawable money.

How a round feels

Calls are voiced in English with optional Hindi. Auto-daub is on by default and can be turned off if you like marking by hand. Pattern wins (line, two line, full house) pay from a published room pool, not from a hidden mystery jackpot — except the 101 hall, which adds a progressive line that needs its own rules tap.

Getting money out

₹200 is the cash floor via UPI or net banking. Ticket credit cannot be cashed. If you convert leftover tickets badly, you can sit under the floor with a wallet that looks busy and still refuses withdraw. Count cash rows only.

Community layer

Private rooms need a four-digit code and a host who has completed KYC. That is useful for family groups and also a vector for off-app stakes. The official rules ban side deals; enforcement is report-based.

Fairness copy

The RNG note names a testing lab in the footer of the 90-ball rules, which is better than average for this batch. Ball order is not shown as a hash until the round ends. Screenshot the end screen if you plan to dispute a missed daub.

Fit check

Bingo 101 is for players who want called rooms and ticket inventory, not crash charts. Keep the ₹101 credit inside halls, and plan a ₹200 cash buffer if you intend to test withdrawal the same week.

Common questions

No. It posts as ticket credit for listed halls and expires on a timer. It cannot be withdrawn.

Yes, with a four-digit code after the host completes KYC. Side betting off the app is against the published house rules.

We saw 75-ball, 90-ball, and a 101-ball special hall with an extra progressive line. Patterns and pools are listed per room.
