This is not a casino

Jio Lottery is a draw app: pick numbers, buy tickets, wait for a published clock. There are no reels and no crash chart. If you installed it expecting 777 slots, you will bounce off the first screen. The cyan-blue split icon is closer to a utility than to a gold marquee, and that matches the product.

Branding caution

The Jio-style wordmark is a marketing look. This listing is not a statement that a telecom operator runs the draws. Verify the legal entity on the about page before you treat the name as a household network product. If the about page is empty or copied, treat the whole wallet as high risk regardless of how familiar the letters look.

₹50 ticket credit

The ₹50 tag adds ticket balance, not withdrawable cash. Tickets are draw-specific; leftover credit from a noon draw did not move to the night draw in our sample. Read each draw's inventory. Buying the wrong draw with credit looks like a vanished bonus when it is only a pool mismatch.

Draw cadence

We saw a midday pick-5 and an evening pick-7. Results post as a digit list with a timestamp. There is a previous-results archive of 30 days, which is enough to spot cadence and not enough to prove fairness. Screenshot the result card if a prize row does not match the digits you think you hit.

Prize cashout

₹100 is the prize floor via UPI or Paytm. Small wins under the floor accumulate. If you only win ₹40 tickets, you wait. Tax-style notices appear above a threshold — read them; we are not tax advisors. Prize cash and leftover ticket credit are different rows; do not assume they combine to reach ₹100.

Subscription risk

A toggle offers auto-buy next draw. It defaults off, which is correct. If you turn it on, cancel it in the same menu; killing the app does not stop the subscription. Auto-buy will spend cash when ticket credit is empty, which is how a “free credit” week becomes a standing UPI debit.

Close

Use Jio Lottery only as a numbered-draw wallet. Confirm the operator name, keep auto-buy off, and remember ticket credit is not cash. This is the wrong import row if you wanted HA 777-style reels.
