One shell, several doors

Yono Games uses a green chat-bubble icon with mixed suits. Inside, tiles jump to rummy, teen patti, and a ludo board. It is a launcher with one cashier, not three independent apps. Skill at rummy does not transfer to ludo tokens.

₹55 combo chip

₹55 is labelled usable on any tile. The wagering table disagrees: rummy counted 100%, teen patti 50%, ludo 25%. If you clear on ludo, you will be there a while. Clear on rummy points if you take the chip.

Rummy tile

Points and pool only — no deals in this shell. Tables are shallower than Rummy Joy. Fine for mixed-session users, weak as a rummy main client.

Teen patti and ludo tiles

Patti boots are mid-range only; no micro-boot. Ludo is 2-player cash and 4-player practice. 4-player cash ludo was greyed out in our build ("coming"). Do not install only for 4-player cash boards.

Shared cashier

UPI, PhonePe, wallet. ₹150 floor. Because one wallet feeds three tiles, a ludo entry can block a rummy cashout until the board ends — same occupied-funds problem as Kavya Club, easier to miss because the tiles look separate.

Notifications

Each tile can ping. Turn off patti invites if you are in a rummy hand; overlapping clocks cause misclicks.

Close

Yono Games is a convenience shell. It will not beat Rummy Joy at rummy or Ludo Zee at boards. Use it if you want one KYC and one wallet across light versions of three games, and clear ₹55 on rummy weighting.

Separate from Yono 777

Do not assume this listing shares a balance with Yono 777. Confirm in each cashier. Two icons, two reviews, two possible wallets.

It counts at a reduced rate in the table we saw. Rummy counted fully. Use rummy points if you want the meter done.

It was greyed out as coming in our build. 2-player cash and 4-player practice were present.

The shared wallet keeps entry chips occupied until the board ends. Finish or leave by the room rules, then cash out.
