This is not a casino

Jio Lottery is a draw app: pick numbers, buy tickets, wait for a published clock. There are no reels and no crash chart. If you installed it expecting 777 slots, you will bounce off the first screen. The cyan-blue split icon is closer to a utility than to a gold marquee, and that matches the product.

Branding caution

The Jio-style wordmark is a marketing look. This listing is not a statement that a telecom operator runs the draws. Verify the legal entity on the about page before you treat the name as a household network product. If the about page is empty or copied, treat the whole wallet as high risk regardless of how familiar the letters look.

₹50 ticket credit

The ₹50 tag adds ticket balance, not withdrawable cash. Tickets are draw-specific; leftover credit from a noon draw did not move to the night draw in our sample. Read each draw’s inventory. Buying the wrong draw with credit looks like a vanished bonus when it is only a pool mismatch.

Draw cadence

We saw a midday pick-5 and an evening pick-7. Results post as a digit list with a timestamp. There is a previous-results archive of 30 days, which is enough to spot cadence and not enough to prove fairness. Screenshot the result card if a prize row does not match the digits you think you hit.

Prize cashout

₹100 is the prize floor via UPI or Paytm. Small wins under the floor accumulate. If you only win ₹40 tickets, you wait. Tax-style notices appear above a threshold — read them; we are not tax advisors. Prize cash and leftover ticket credit are different rows; do not assume they combine to reach ₹100.

Subscription risk

A toggle offers auto-buy next draw. It defaults off, which is correct. If you turn it on, cancel it in the same menu; killing the app does not stop the subscription. Auto-buy will spend cash when ticket credit is empty, which is how a “free credit” week becomes a standing UPI debit.

Close

Use Jio Lottery only as a numbered-draw wallet. Confirm the operator name, keep auto-buy off, and remember ticket credit is not cash. This is the wrong import row if you wanted HA 777-style reels.

- Independent score note

We do not sell score slots or host APK files — only timestamped audit snapshots.

Common questions

The wordmark looks familiar. Check the legal entity on the about page. This review does not certify operator identity.

No. It is ticket balance for listed draws and may not roll between midday and evening cycles.

Prizes sit in the wallet until they reach the ₹100 floor. They are not paid as tickets unless the rules for that draw say so.
