What the icon sells

The art says Teen Patti in gold, with a red Wogo ribbon and ace-king chips. The slug is lucky-patti; the tables are classic three-card: sequence, trial, pure sequence, with optional side boots. This is not rummy and not a slot wall.

₹300 boot bonus

₹300 credits as bonus chips with a 5x playthrough on teen patti pots only. Side games (if you tap the extra wheel) did not count. Pot-limit rooms clear the meter slower than no-limit because pots cap.

Room ladder

Boot values step from very small to uncomfortable. The jump between mid and high is steep. Sit one level below your ego, especially on packed evening tables where raise patterns get noisy.

Payments

UPI, Paytm, and PhonePe all on the first cashier. ₹250 out is lower than the bonus headline, which is unusual and useful — you can theoretically exit after playthrough without a huge leftover. KYC still sits in front of payout.

Table integrity

The RNG note is generic. Player-collusion reports exist as a button; we cannot audit collusion from the client. Prefer tables with a seen/blind timer that is not paused by the host.

Chat

Table chat is on by default and is where tilt happens. Mute is one tap. Use it. Emojis do not change the deck.

Close

Lucky Patti is a straightforward teen patti client with a generous-looking ₹300 that still needs 5x on pots. Keep side wheels closed until the bonus is done, then decide if those extras are worth cash.

Extra caution

Three-card variance is fast. A session clock that you cannot ignore lives in settings — turn it on before the first boot, not after a bad trail.

Common questions

No. It is three-card teen patti. Sequences and trials, not 13-card rummy sets.

Not in the rules we captured. Only teen patti pots moved the meter.

It is on-icon branding. Table rules and the cashier matter more than the ribbon name.
